Decorate an atrium, sunroom, or interior garden with this elegant antique jardinière, crafted in France circa 1820. Designed in the Louis XV taste, the planter stands on scrolled escargot feet adorned with acanthus leaves, supporting a graceful bombe-form body with pronounced serpentine lines.

The facade is richly carved with garlanded foliage, delicate floral sprays, and a prominent central scallop shell motif, all set within a shaped and scalloped apron. The carved ornamentation is enhanced by a softly timeworn painted finish with gilt accents, highlighting the movement and depth of the relief. The contrast between the warm, aged exterior tones and the original blue-painted interior adds visual interest and authenticity.

The piece retains its original removable zinc liner, making it both decorative and functional. The surface shows a beautifully aged patina with minor wear consistent with age, contributing to its antique character and charm.

This refined and substantial planter offers a striking presence, ideal for displaying greenery in a conservatory, living room, or covered terrace.
