Decorate a living room, library, or study with this remarkable antique French religious plaque. Hand-carved in France circa 1680, the rectangular wooden panel depicts the biblical scene of "The Conversion of Saint Paul on the Road to Damascus," rendered in intricate high relief and framed by elaborate Baroque scrollwork.

The dramatic composition captures the moment Saul, later known as Saint Paul, is struck by divine revelation while traveling to Damascus. At the center, the fallen figure lies beneath his horse, surrounded by soldiers dressed in classical attire. One mounted figure gestures toward the heavens, while another horse rears nearby, adding movement and theatrical intensity to the scene. Above, a celestial figure appears amid swirling clouds, symbolizing the divine intervention that transformed Saul's life. In the background, a detailed cityscape of domed buildings, towers, and architectural structures evokes the ancient city of Damascus.

The central relief is surrounded by an impressive openwork frame embellished with deeply carved acanthus leaves, scrolling foliage, and floral motifs characteristic of the Baroque period. The exceptional depth of the carving creates a wonderful interplay of light and shadow throughout the composition.

The antique religious panel is in excellent condition commensurate with age and use, retaining a beautiful bleached wood patina that highlights the detailed craftsmanship. Display this distinctive piece on a wall or resting on a console as an expression of French religious art and traditional woodcarving.
