This refined period antique French side table or small desk was crafted during the Louis XV period, circa 1760. Expertly constructed from solid walnut, the piece features an elegant bow-front façade fitted with a single central drawer, offering both visual softness and practical storage. The shaped apron is subtly carved and flows seamlessly into graceful cabriole legs terminating in scrolled feet, all hallmarks of authentic mid-18th-century French design. The rectangular top is formed from wide walnut planks and retains a beautifully aged surface with visible grain variation, warm coloration, and honest wear consistent with age and use. The drawer displays traditional hand-cut construction and is fitted with period-appropriate hardware. Throughout, the table showcases a rich, naturally developed walnut patina that underscores its authenticity as a true period piece. Thanks to its well-balanced proportions, this antique table is ideally sized for use as a small writing desk, while also lending itself effortlessly to use as a console table, side table, or occasional table. Elegant yet versatile, it works equally well in a study, living room, entryway, or bedroom, pairing beautifully with both formal and relaxed interiors. Dimensions: 36.5"W x 27.5"D x 30"H
