Bring refined elegance to a wall with this charming antique French pastoral painting, crafted circa 1760. The horizontal composition captures a romantic courtship scene in a lush countryside setting, where a young couple reclines beside a stream, accompanied by sheep and framed by dense foliage and a distant chateau. The figures are dressed in richly colored period attire, her flowing blue gown and his vibrant red jacket creating a striking visual contrast against the soft green landscape.

Executed in the Rococo tradition, the composition reflects the lighthearted, idyllic spirit associated with artists such as Boucher and Fragonard, with delicate brushwork and a gentle, narrative quality throughout. The painting retains a beautifully aged surface with subtle craquelure and a soft, timeworn patina that enhances its authenticity. The artwork is set in its original painted wood frame, finished in a neutral gray tone and decorated with a classic beaded border, complementing the palette without overpowering the scene. Excellent condition commensurate with age and use. A lovely decorative piece, ideal for a living room, bedroom, or above a console in a more intimate space.
