This antique Empire-style table lamp combines refined neoclassical design with richly detailed bronze craftsmanship. Crafted in France circa 1860, the fixture was originally a three-arm candelabrum, later converted into an electric table lamp while retaining its decorative character and architectural proportions.

The lamp stands on a stepped triangular base embellished with scrolling feet, acanthus leaves, and finely chased gilt bronze ornaments. Rising from the base is a tall, tapered column with a warm brown patinated bronze finish, accented by contrasting bronze doré mounts featuring intricate foliage and classical motifs. The upper section displays three gracefully curved candle arms with decorative candle cups, reflecting the symmetry and classical influences characteristic of the French Empire style.

The candelabrum has been converted into a functional table lamp with two electric lights positioned above the candle arms, complete with pull-chain switches. A decorative flame-shaped bronze finial crowns the fixture, adding a distinctive finishing touch. The combination of richly gilded accents and darker patinated bronze creates a striking two-tone appearance.

Ideal for a library, study, or living room, this antique French Empire lamp is in excellent condition commensurate with age and use, retaining its rich bronze patina and detailed gilt ornamentation.

Custom finial included. Lampshade not included.
