Bring Gothic elegance to a study or music room with this ornate antique “Lutrin” or lectern. Crafted in France circa 1880, the double-sided music stand is forged from solid iron and features intricate scrollwork framing a central fleur-de-lis medallion, highlighted with subtle gilt accents for added depth and contrast. The angled panel swivels for dual-side use and rests atop a twisted stem supported by three arched legs ending in hoof-like feet. The fleur-de-lis finial and ironwork flourishes evoke French heraldic tradition, while the hand-hammered detailing and aged patina enhance its old-world charm. Measuring 33 inches wide, 16 inches deep, and 61 inches high, this versatile and sculptural stand is ideal for sheet music, cookbooks, or as a decorative folio display. Excellent condition commensurate with age and use.
