Bring grandeur and utility to a formal living or dining space with this impressive antique buffet. Crafted in France circa 1860 and built of solid oak, the cabinet showcases exceptional craftsmanship with richly carved detailing throughout. The two front doors are adorned with large hand-carved medallions featuring scrolling acanthus leaves and central domed bosses, flanked by bold barley twist columns. The thick molded top is edged with a carved border and features intricate parquetry inlay, adding refined texture and depth. The interior reveals two wide compartments divided by a central support and fitted with three long shelves, providing ample space for storing dishes, glassware, linens, or collectibles. In excellent condition commensurate with age and use, the buffet boasts a warm and rich walnut-toned patina. With its bold proportions and stately silhouette, this French Renaissance-style cabinet would anchor a dining room, entryway, or formal study with timeless elegance. The piece retains its original lock and two working keys.
