Crafted in France circa 1870, this antique wall mirror exemplifies the refined elegance of the Louis XVI Revival, with its structured neoclassical form and finely detailed ornamentation. The rectangular frame is decorated with a harmonious combination of twisted rope molding, reeded borders, and a delicate inner band of laurel motif, all set against a softly distressed white painted ground with warm gilt accents.
The mirror retains its original mercury glass, exhibiting light, even foxing and subtle surface variation that enhances the depth and character of the reflection. The timeworn finish across the frame reveals a beautifully layered patina, with gentle wear that highlights the craftsmanship and authenticity of the piece.
With its generous scale and clean lines, the mirror can be displayed vertically as a classic pier mirror or horizontally above a console, mantel, or vanity, offering versatility while maintaining strong visual presence. The balanced proportions and timeless Louis XVI styling allow it to integrate seamlessly into both traditional and transitional interiors.
The mirror is in excellent condition commensurate with age and use.
