Crafted in France circa 1870, this handsome antique trestle table exemplifies the understated strength and authenticity of French provincial farmhouse furniture. Designed for everyday use in rural interiors, the long rectangular form reflects the refectory tradition, where durability and proportion were prioritized over ornament. Constructed from solid oak and over 8 feet long, the plank top showcases beautifully varied grain, softened edges, and natural surface irregularities developed through generations of use. Forged iron diamond nails accent the top and base, adding subtle decorative detail. The bleached finish enhances the oak's character, revealing knots, shrinkage lines, and gentle wear beneath a warm, time-earned patina. The farm table is raised on two substantial trestle bases, each carved with sculptural supports set on shaped platform feet and joined by a long central stretcher for excellent stability. Traditional mortise-and-tenon joinery is visible throughout, underscoring the quality of craftsmanship. Balanced and architectural, this antique French table works beautifully as a dining table, kitchen table, or statement piece in a wine cellar. Excellent condition commensurate with age and use; will sit 8 to 12 comfortably. Dimensions: 98" W x 33.5" D x 29.75" H
