Bring rustic refinement and classical detail to an interior with this striking antique console table. Crafted in Spain circa 1860, the piece features a richly carved oak base topped with a substantial slab of Breccia Pernice marble, prized for its warm brown, taupe, and cream tones with intricate veining. The surface is finished with a beveled edge and soft bullnose profile, offering both durability and elegance. The scalloped apron houses three side-by-side drawers, each adorned with deeply carved rosettes and stylized floral motifs, and dressed with original iron drop pulls. Boldly scrolled ox yoke legs are hand-carved and connected by a forged wrought iron stretcher with a central rosette medallion, providing both structural integrity and decorative flair. A light oak finish enhances the natural grain of the wood, while the richly veined marble adds a sophisticated contrast. In excellent condition commensurate with age and use, this long and narrow console is ideal for a grand hallway, dining room, or as a dramatic sofa back. A distinguished blend of Spanish Baroque charm and stately presence. Measures: 86.75" W x 22" D x 37.5" H.
