This striking antique Alpine bench was crafted in the Black Forest tradition, likely in Austria's Tyrolean region, circa 1930–1950. Sculptural and highly expressive, the bench is constructed from naturally shed deer antlers, expertly hand-assembled into a dramatic yet structurally sound base formed by intertwined tines and organic curves. The composition reflects the refined rustic craftsmanship associated with Austro-German hunting lodge furnishings, where functional seating was elevated to sculptural form. The rectangular seat is upholstered in richly patinated brown leather, secured with original decorative nailhead trim along the perimeter. The leather surface displays surface scuffs, gentle wear, and natural variations consistent with age and use, contributing warmth, depth, and an authentic antique character. The antler base exhibits beautiful tonal variation and honest aging, with a well-preserved surface that enhances the bench's sculptural presence without compromising stability. Originally intended for Alpine chalets and mountain lodges, this antique antler bench offers both practical seating and strong decorative impact. It is ideally suited for placement at the foot of a bed, in an entry hall, or as an accent piece within a curated rustic, lodge-style, or European country interior. The bench is in excellent condition commensurate with age and use. Dimensions: 43.75"W x 18.5"D x 17.5"H
