Bring character and function to your hearth with this antique French firewood box crafted circa 1920. Built with a wooden carcass clad in richly patinated repoussé brass panels, the coffer is decorated on all sides with lively tavern scenes in the manner of David Teniers, depicting peasants gathered around tables in moments of music, drink, and conversation. The detailed relief work adds depth and narrative, making the piece as decorative as it is practical.

The slanted hinged lid, fitted with an interior chain support, opens to reveal ample storage for kindling or firewood.

Raised on discreet rolling casters, the box is easy to move and ideal for placement beside a fireplace, while also working beautifully as a small accent chest in a living room or study.

The piece is in very good condition commensurate with age and use, with a warm, time-softened brass patina and minor surface wear including light blemishing to the front panel consistent with age. A charming and useful antique that blends rustic appeal with European craftsmanship.
