This elegant antique French oval coffee table was crafted circa 1920 and reflects refined Belle Époque taste with Louis XV revival influence. The tilting oval top is framed by a finely worked silvered copper gallery, retaining a softly aged patina with warm undertones visible at points of wear, consistent with period silvering techniques. The surface is finished with a decorative printed paper top under glass, displaying an ornate botanical motif inspired by 18th-century chinoiserie and Rococo designs, with scrolling branches and stylized floral elements arranged in a balanced and harmonious composition. The top is supported by a graceful forged iron base with arched legs joined by a shaped central stretcher, providing both stability and visual lightness. Both decorative and functional, this piece works beautifully as a coffee table, tray table, or accent table in a salon or living space. The table is in excellent antique condition commensurate with age and use and retains a strong decorative presence suitable for classic, French country, or transitional interiors.
