Elevate your interior with this elegant mid-century French magazine rack, crafted circa 1950 and designed in the iconic Maison Baguès style. The antique-inspired stand is executed in brass with a refined faux bamboo motif, a signature design element that brings a light, airy sophistication while referencing neoclassical taste.
The open-frame construction features rhythmic, geometric supports with clean intersecting lines, creating both visual interest and practical storage for newspapers, books, or journals. Its sculptural silhouette allows it to function as both a useful accessory and a decorative accent, ideal beside a sofa, armchair, or in a study or bedroom.
The piece retains a beautifully aged gilt patina across the brass, adding warmth and depth consistent with its vintage character. It is in excellent condition commensurate with age and use, with a sturdy structure and crisp detailing throughout.
Maison Baguès, established in Paris in the 19th century, became renowned for its luxurious lighting and furniture, particularly its mastery of metalwork and the popularization of faux bamboo designs that remain highly collectible today.
