Add timeless Parisian elegance to your interior with this refined mid-century side table attributed to Maison Jansen. Crafted in France circa 1960, the piece features a gilt brass frame resting on fluted legs with ringed collars, a hallmark of Jansen's neoclassical modern vocabulary. The two-tier design is fitted with smoked glass shelves, each bordered in deep black with geometric line decoration, creating a striking contrast against the warm brass structure. Maison Jansen, founded in Paris in 1880, was one of the most influential decorating firms of the 20th century. Known for blending classical motifs with modernist simplicity, the house counted European royalty and the White House among its clientele. This table embodies that glamorous yet versatile aesthetic, perfectly suited for a living room, bedroom, or office. In excellent condition commensurate with age and use, with a lustrous patina to the brass. A superb example of Jansen's ability to unite function, refinement, and modern luxury.
