This elegant antique mid-century French side table was crafted circa 1960 and reflects the refined aesthetic associated with Maison Jansen-style design. The table features a clean, architectural gilt metal frame with slender square legs and precise horizontal stretchers, supporting a clear glass top and a matching lower glass shelf. The balanced proportions and restrained silhouette exemplify the sophisticated simplicity favored in French interiors of the period. The gilt metal retains a warm, softly aged finish with subtle surface wear consistent with age and use, enhancing its character while preserving crisp lines. Both glass surfaces are clear, well fitted, and allow the structure to remain visually light and versatile. Well suited as a side table, lamp table, or refined accent piece, this antique French table integrates seamlessly into both modern and traditional interiors, offering timeless mid-century elegance influenced by classic Parisian design.
