This whimsical set of four hand-painted porcelain figurines depicts the beloved characters from Alexandre Dumas’ swashbuckling classic The Three Musketeers. Crafted with fine detail and lively expression, each musketeer, D’Artagnan, Athos, Porthos, and Aramis, is captured in a dynamic stance, adorned with ruffled collars, feathered hats, swords, and colorful sashes. Standing approximately 12.5 inches high, the figures rest on individual plinth bases inscribed with their names in script. Crafted in France circa 1960, these collectible figures embody romanticized 17th-century style and literary charm. The set is in excellent condition with no visible chips or cracks. Ideal for display in a library, study, or collector’s cabinet, they bring drama, wit, and historical flair to any setting. A rare and delightful homage to French literary heritage.
