Decorate a hearth with this elegant antique wrought iron fire screen from France, crafted circa 1960. The tall single-panel form features a gracefully arched silhouette embellished with intricate hand-forged scrollwork in a Gothic Revival style, centered by a symmetrical foliate motif that adds both movement and visual balance. The fine mesh backing provides practical protection from sparks while allowing a clear view of the fire, combining function with decorative appeal. The forged iron frame is detailed with twisted bars and ring accents along the base, all resting on sturdy iron feet for stability. The piece has a rich dark patinated finish, enhancing its sculptural quality and timeless character. This versatile fire screen works beautifully in a traditional or rustic interior, placed in front of a fireplace, or used decoratively to soften an unused hearth while adding architectural interest to the room. It is in excellent condition commensurate with age and use.
