Add architectural character to an interior with this exceptional pair of antique French carved oak wall panels. Handcrafted in France circa 1780, these impressive decorative elements stand almost 7.5 feet tall and showcase the artistry and craftsmanship of traditional French woodcarving.

Each tall, narrow panel features an elaborate openwork composition of scrolling acanthus leaves, intertwining vines, blooming flowers, and finely detailed foliage. The gracefully curved motifs extend vertically in a flowing, symmetrical arrangement, creating a beautifully balanced pair with complementary, mirror-image designs. The deeply carved relief and pierced sections add remarkable dimension, allowing light and shadow to accentuate the intricate botanical decoration.

Executed in the Louis XIV taste with Baroque influences, the architectural carvings feature bold C-scrolls, sweeping foliage, and richly sculpted floral elements. The natural oak has developed a warm, light brown patina, highlighting the wood grain and the depth of the carving.

These antique French wall panels are in excellent condition commensurate with age and use, retaining their authentic character and beautifully aged finish. Ideal for flanking a doorway, fireplace, or large mirror, they could also be displayed as decorative architectural accents in a grand entryway, living room, or dining room.

Dimensions: 19.5"W x 89"H (each).
