Bring movement and Old World charm to a wall with this delightful pair of antique carved cherubs crafted in Italy circa 1880. Executed in solid walnut, the expressive putti are sculpted in dramatic flying poses with outstretched arms and softly modeled features, creating the illusion of suspended motion as though gliding through the air.
Each cherub is beautifully hand carved with rounded cheeks, flowing curls, and animated gestures that capture the playful spirit associated with Renaissance and Baroque Italian decoration. Their compact scale makes them especially versatile for layering into interiors, whether mounted above a doorway, flanking a mirror or painting, or incorporated into a gallery wall for a touch of architectural character.
Unlike larger ecclesiastical carvings, these antique wall figures have an intimate and decorative quality that works equally well in traditional, European, or collected interiors. The carvings retain a rich, warm walnut patina with beautiful depth and surface character acquired over more than a century.
The antique Italian cherub sculptures are in excellent condition commensurate with age and use, and feature hooks on the reverse for easy wall installation. A charming and highly decorative pair with strong visual movement and timeless appeal.
