This sculptural pair of contemporary French ceramic vases was crafted circa 2010 and reflects the refined organic aesthetic seen in high-end European decorative design. Each vessel is entirely hand-built and richly adorned with dense, applied barbotine relief inspired by mushroom clusters and natural growth formations, creating exceptional texture and a strong biomorphic presence. The rounded bodies taper gently toward the necks, while the organically undulating rims are finished with the same sculptural detailing, allowing the vases to read as fully three-dimensional objects from every angle. A glossy white glaze is subtly accented with warm ochre-brown tones that highlight the relief work and add depth without overpowering the form. Elegant yet bold, these vases bridge contemporary design and nature-inspired sculpture, making them ideal statement pieces for a console, pedestal, or dining table. They are in excellent condition commensurate with age and use and display beautifully together or as symmetrical accents in a curated interior.
