Decorate an entryway, hallway, or powder room with this elegant pair of antique French wall sconces. Hand-forged in France circa 1920, each slender wall torchere features a distinctive Gothic-inspired design, combining traditional iron craftsmanship with sculptural detailing and a beautifully polished finish.

Each sconce is constructed from forged iron, featuring a tall vertical backplate crowned with a gracefully rolled scroll at the top. The elongated backplate is embellished with decorative hammered details, twisted iron elements, and tapered scrolling extensions at the bottom, creating an architectural silhouette. A single projecting iron arm supports a shallow circular bobeche and an upright light fitted with a decorative faux wax candle sleeve, enhancing the fixture's authentic Old World character.

The antique wall lights have been newly wired to US standards, with one light each, and are in excellent condition commensurate with age and use. Both fixtures retain a rich, polished iron finish with subtle variations in tone that highlight the hand-forged craftsmanship.

Perfect for flanking a mirror, doorway, or fireplace, these Gothic-style sconces would complement a traditional French country interior, rustic retreat, or contemporary setting.
