This beautiful pair of vintage table lamps was crafted in Italy circa 1960 in the Neoclassical style. Featuring sculptural urn-shaped bodies embellished with deeply carved acanthus leaves, the matching lamps combine classical Italian design with a sophisticated two-tone blackened and patinated silver leaf finish.

Each lamp stands on a square molded pedestal base supporting a circular fluted foot and an elegant baluster-shaped urn. The rounded bodies are richly decorated with overlapping acanthus leaves in high relief, their gracefully curved forms extending upward toward a narrow neck crowned with scrolling details. The sculpted foliage is enhanced by a rich silvered finish, contrasting beautifully with the dark recessed areas and creating exceptional depth and texture.

The square bases feature stepped moldings with softly aged silver leaf surfaces, complementing the decorative urns above. The combination of classical proportions, intricate carving, and contrasting finishes gives these lamps a refined architectural character, equally suited to traditional and transitional interiors.

Each lamp has been newly wired to US standard and is fitted with two light sockets, providing ample illumination for a living room, bedroom, or entryway. The matching fixtures would be especially attractive on bedside tables, a pair of end tables, or a long console.

The vintage Italian table lamps are in excellent condition commensurate with age and use, retaining their beautiful blackened and patinated silver leaf finish. Shades are not included.
