This set of six Louis XIII style dining chairs was crafted in southern France, circa 1970. Each chair is built of solid oak and reflects the bold, architectural character associated with 17th century French design. The tall ladder-back form features three shaped and scalloped slats framed by sturdy uprights, while the base is constructed with turned front legs connected by a classic turned stretcher and straight side stretchers for stability. The seats have been newly upholstered in rich cognac brown leather and finished with decorative nailhead trim, offering both comfort and refined contrast against the warm oak frame. The wood displays a handsome grain and a naturally aged patina that complements the traditional Louis XIII silhouette. This antique-style set is in excellent condition commensurate
