This vintage French coffee table, crafted circa 1970, showcases a refined blend of sculptural ironwork and textured glass, offering a striking balance of structure and lightness.

The square top is fitted with a thick slab of crackle glass, richly textured with a shimmering, fractured pattern that catches and diffuses light beautifully. The glass rests within a custom-fitted iron frame, emphasizing its clean lines while allowing the surface to remain the focal point.

The base is hand-forged in solid iron and features elegant cabriole legs terminating in tight scroll feet, joined by a shaped stretcher with a central scrolled motif. The metal has been polished to a soft sheen, revealing a subtle patina that enhances the craftsmanship without overpowering the design.

With its generous scale and airy silhouette, this antique-style cocktail table anchors a seating area while maintaining visual openness. Ideal for a living room or covered patio, it pairs equally well with both traditional and modern interiors. Excellent condition commensurate with age and use, with a beautifully preserved glass surface and a rich, lightly patinated iron finish.
